In Dispute Over Hogs and Wants
$1,000 Damages

Aberdeen Gretna Green.

Robert S. Scott has filed suit for damages in the sum of $1,000 in the common Pleas Court of Adams County against William Campbell for injuries received at Aberdeen August 5th, when the plaintiff says the defendant struck him on the head with a stone, wounding him and incapacitating him from labor.

Scott and Campbell are neighbors and live in Sprig township, and it is said that they had bad trouble over Scott's hogs getting into Campbell's corn field.

GOOD BOYS!

Maysville Wiped Up the Diamond
With Richmond Yesterday—
Size of Wallop, 14 to 2

Yesterday afternoon Maysville defeated Richmond by the handsome score of 14 to 2.

Schrader worked for the Rivermen and pitched a great game. Up to the sixth he was invincible and after the locals had scored fourteen runs he slackened up and allowed the visitors six scattered bingles. Jones yanked Black out of the box in the fourth and took his place. He turned the contest into a farce. Yesterday's feature was the base stealing of

Yesterdays feature was the base stealing of

INFANTILE PARALYSIS

Case in East Maysville Exciting
Much Interest

It is said that Arlie, the thirteen months-old child of Mr. and Mrs. Huff Gunn of East Second street, is the victim of a genuine case of infantile paralysis, which is considered by eminent scientists as not only infectious, but one of the most dreaded maladies of modern medicine. It is caused by a parasite, 'tis said, which medical science has as yet never been able to discover.

The Mason County Board of Health has taken charge of the situation and has had Dr. L. Brand, who has the case, to quarantine at Miss Gunn's residence and to publish the fact that should the disease become epidemic its results in Maysville would leave its mark of horror in a trail of paralyzed infants.

USED SHARK POWER

Man Rigged Up Boat With Small Engine That Could Go.

Won First Place In Race—Everything Lovely Till Inquisitive Swimmer Dived Beneath Craft and Made Discovery.

Kittitas Squaw Dresses In Finery Woo Back Deserting Spouse—Met Him 80 Years Ago.

Newbern, N. C.—George Arthur, a fisherman, in the neighborhood of Adams creek near Neuse river, 35 miles from this city, caught in one of his nets a large shark.

He penned it in a pool which he made for the purpose, and after exhibiting it there for a month or more it suddenly vanished.

Arthur told the inquirers that he had taken pity on the "varmint" and returned it to its native waters.

About this time Arthur purchased a "long, low, rakish" skiff, explaining to his friends that he intended placing an engine in it and making a racing boat out of it.

For several weeks he devoted many hours a day to remodeling it and placing a two-horse power engine in it.

At last he announced that the boat was in readiness for any and all comers, and offered to bet that he would win.

Several men who thought they had fast boats inspected Arthur's boat and laughed at his diminutive motor.

But he said it was of a new and powerful type and that anyway he'd back it to win.

So they arranged a race.

There were six contestants, and among the number were some exceedingly fast boats.

Arthur was asked to give a trial exhibition of his engine's ability, but he refused.

He said they could see it work the day of the race.

On the appointed day several hundred people lined the river bank.

The course was about five miles.

The boats were lined up for the start and at the crack of a pistol off they went.

So faint was the exhaust of Arthur's new engine that it could scarcely be heard, and within the first 100 yards he was left far behind the other racers.

However, things had only begun to happen.

Arthur was seen to settle back in the steersman's seat and push a small lever.

Immediately the little boat sprang forward.

Faster and faster it cut through the water.

Passing the other boats and their startled crews,

it sped on toward the goal and arrived several minutes ahead of its nearest competitor.

That the little engine was the real thing was no longer doubted, and the owner received many offers to purchase, but declined them all.

After that Arthur was frequently seen on the river with his craft cutting through the water at a terrific rate.

Recently a party of picnickers visited the place, and during the day hired Arthur to take them for a trip on the river.

They, too, were amazed at the boat's speed.

One of the more inquisitive decided that there was something not entirely on the level about the engine.

Arriving at a desirable point,

a suggestion that the party go in swimming was made, and soon several of the young men were in the water.

Suddenly one of them dived beneath the boat and when he arose to the surface lost no time in scrambling back into the craft.

He said he had seen a shark just beneath the boat.

Arthur became greatly agitated at this point and suggested that they leave at once, but the other members of the party resolved to see whether their companion was fooling them.

Seizing an oar, one of the young men dashed it into the water beneath the craft, and, sure enough, found the shark.

They were going to kill or catch it, when Arthur told them that the fish was in a wire cage beneath the vessel and that he used it for motor power.

Further investigation proved it to be true.

After catching the big fish Arthur

STAG PARTY SEES SEA LION

Animal Installs Itself As Watchdog At A Mansion, According To A Belated Party.

Hillsboro, Cal.—A weird story to the effect that a real live sea lion had found its way from the ocean beach to Uplands, the Hillsboro home of Charles Templeton Crocker, has been going the rounds in San Mateo county.

Up till the other night the report was received with considerable skepticism, albeit many motorists are said to have steered clear of the Crocker gateway, at which the new "watch-dog" was supposed to have installed himself.

The monster of the deep may have departed for regions where there is more congenital society than that of Hillsboro—millionaires, but that he was there in spirit and in truth, even if more in spirit than in truth, is no longer doubted.

What greater confirmation of the report is needed than that he was alleged to have been seen by members of a jovial stag party returning in the cold, gray dawn from a midnight revel at a polo club?

As a rule poloists do not run to sea lions, but they are a pleasing variation of vision of pink crocodiles, blue lizards and polka dot boa constrictors.

HALF LOVE ONLY HINDERS AMBITION

"Does love help or hinder an ambitious man?"

Jeanette asked me that question after telling me that Jimmie had come home in a rather depressed state of mind, because Tom Jenkins had confided to him that since his marriage to Daisy he had been unable to pursue the ambition of his life—to become a successful stock broker.

It seems Daisy is jealous of Tom's business. She complains whenever business takes him away from her for an evening or keeps him downtown late, and rather than have a scene when he reaches home, Tom tells prospective customers that it is impossible for him to see them after 4 o'clock, or to call upon them in the evening. So dear little Jeanette is worried for fear Jimmie will think his love for her is a hindrance to his ambition.

"Jeanette, dear," I said, "you have no cause to worry, even if Jimmie is grumpy. It depends largely upon the love and the lover whether love will be a help or hindrance in life."

"Just because some grouchy old codger has said that 'love slays ambition' is no reason to believe it, and close observation shows it to be a pretty poor ambition that ever suffers extinction."

"But Cousin Daisy wants Tom to take a position in a bank, where he will have regular hours, and she can always look for him to be home shortly after 3 in the afternoon. Couldn't he be ambitious in a bank as well as selling stocks and bonds?"

"Surely he may, my dear," I answered. "Love may transform the goal aspired to. It may even change a man's aims; but the man who is truly ambitious to make a name for himself, like Jimmie, will assuredly be more ambitious, not less, because his successes will bring happiness to you, whom he loves, as well as to himself."

"Then why should Tom not be satisfied to do as Daisy wishes?"

"The fault, my dear Jeanette, lies with Daisy, not with Tom's love or her love. It is always so when the so-called 'love' hampers rather than helps a man to rise in the world. It is not 'love,' dear child, but selfishness pure and simple. Selfishness and jealousy can wreck any man's ambitions if allowed to interfere with them."

"Do you think Daisy is jealous and jealous of Tom's ambition? Isn't it because she loves him so dearly that makes her want him with her every minute he can be there?"

"Jeanette, you love, Jimmie, do you?"

"Why, of course, cousin, I—"

"That's what I thought. Well would you put your own social pleasures before Jimmie's work?"

"No."

"Would you be angry if he were detained a little late at the office, especially if you had planned an early dinner so you could go out in the evening?"

"N-no—no. I should be sure Jimmie would get home as early as he possibly could under such circumstances."

"Are you interested in your husband's business?"

"Of course I am—you know that he always talks things over with me when he has any interesting news or problems to decide."

"Very well, then. That is as it should be. You need have no fear, and neither need Jimmie, that your love will ever hinder him in his advancement. It is only the self-centered, foolish, selfish woman who will in any way interfere with her husband's ambition. Hers is not 'love,' but rather selfish greed for all her husband's time and of all his money, too, forgetting that to make the money necessary to satisfy her wants he must spend many hours outside those prescribed by banking houses as 'business hours.'

"Remember, my dear child, that if Daisy loved Tom more truly his desires and ambitions would become so wholly hers that she would naturally be a help to him."

"It is only the half lovers and the self-lovers that ever hinder a husband's ambitions. Now run along home and tell Jimmie what I have said to you and see if he doesn't agree with me."

Cotton Duck for Motor Tires.

One million yards of high grade duck, to be made from sea island and Egyptian cotton, has recently been sold by a Georgia cotton mill to a manufacturer of automobile tires.

The quality of this material is of the highest grade, used only in the larger tires, the lower grade of goods being available for the smaller tires. One million yards of cotton duck, one yard wide, is a pretty big order to go from one mill to one tire manufacturer.

PEARL CULTURE IN JAPAN

MONG the many wonders of the orient there is none more interesting than culture pearls.

These gems of the sea should not be confounded with the so-called artificial pearl, for they are true pearls in every sense of the word. The pearl-bearing oyster is made to produce pearls by a scientific process in four years.

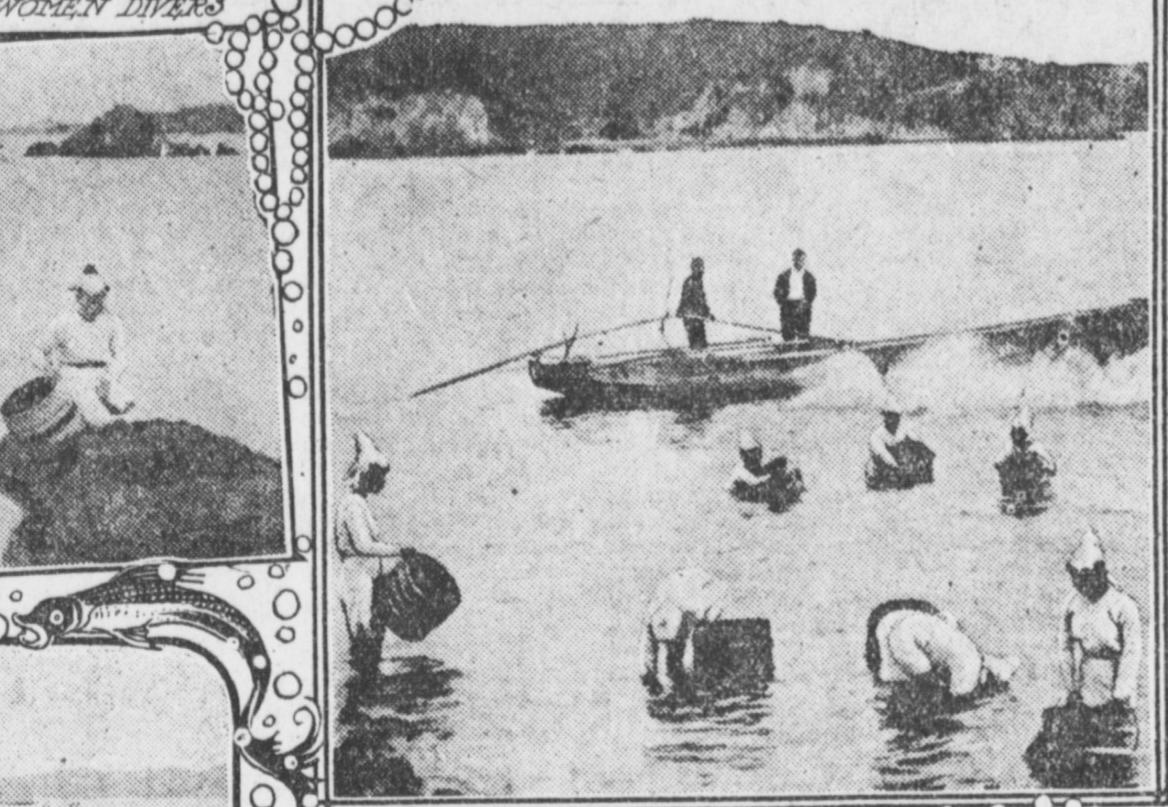

In early times people had all kinds of ridiculous and extravagant ideas about the way in which pearls were produced. Even so learned a man as Pliny believed that they were drops of dew, which, falling into the gaping mouth of the mollusc, were transformed by the animal's power, into pearls.

From Ariel's song in "Tempest":

Full fathom five thy father lies;
Of his bones are coral made;
Those are pearl that were his eyes;
Nothing of him that doth fade,

INSPECTING THE OYSTER-BEDS BY WOMEN DIVERS

WOMEN DIVERS AT REST

WOMEN DIVERS AT WORK

"TAKOKU" ISLAND, THE MIKIMOTO PEARL CULTURE STATION

But doth suffer a sea change
Into something rich and strange.

We see that in Shakespeare's time men had peculiar notions about the wonders wrought by the animals of the sea. Again, in Moore's poem, "Peri and the Pearl," we find:

And precious the tear as that rain from the sky
When turns into pearls as it falls in the sea.

Aelian thought that pearls were produced by lightning flashing into the open shells.

Turning from these fantastic, though interesting, theories let us glance at the modern explanations of the formation of these beautiful products of nature.

You have, no doubt, often seen shells of molluscs lined with a smooth am iridescent coating, which is called nacre or mother-of-pearl. This coating, like the rest of the shell, is produced by the animal, and is made up mostly of carbonate of lime and an organic matrix which usually presents a laminated texture. You must have noticed that the color and brilliancy of this layer differ in various species of shells. For instance, in the ordinary oyster it is of a lustrous white, and in a kind of shell called abalone or ear shell (Haliotis), the nacre is of a greenish blue tinge, changing to purple as you turn it in your hand. In another kind, known as the black-lipped-shell, (Margaritifera), the mother-of-pearl is of a greenish black color. In the shells of the true pearl-oysters the nacre is of a clear, delicate white, which has the sheen of floss silk faintly tinted with azure, exhibiting a beautiful play of color—a quality which makes these shells of great value in commerce.

Now it often happens that foreign substances, such as sand grains, microscopic organisms of various kinds, parasitic worms, crabs, or sometimes even small fishes become introduced by accident or otherwise inside the shell or into the tissues of the mollusc's soft body. In such cases, the animal sometimes begins to deposit a part of the material which goes to form the nacreous layer of the shell around or over these foreign objects and as new material is added year after year in the form of layers these concretions which may at first be very tiny grow to be of a considerable size. And when this takes place in a shell with specially beautiful nacre such as that of the pearl-oyster, the result may be an object of great beauty, prized from ancient times as a priceless jewel. In this strange way, pearls, the handsomest products of nature are produced.

Such being their origin, pearls may be formed in any kind of mollusc, bivalved or spiral. And just as the nacre of different kinds of shells differs, so the pearls themselves vary according to the shell, which produces them. Thus the pearls of the common oyster, the scallop and the giant clam, are milky white and not very bright, while those of the sea mussel are usually black.

Perhaps you have noticed that pearls are of many different shapes, some round, some pear-shaped, some egg-shaped and some of all manner of fantastic shapes. The round, pear-shaped and egg-shaped ones are known as oriental or virgin pearls, while those of irregular shapes are called baroque pearls. These are sometimes found in the shapes of fishes, birds wings, or creeping worms. The seed pearls, which are generally used for medicinal purposes by the Chinese, are always very small and usually found together in numbers.

At the Third National Industrial exhibition, held in Tokyo in 1890, Mr. Mikimoto exhibited in the aquarium of fisheries section some living specimens of the pearl-oyster. This made him acquainted with Dr. Mitsukuri, professor of zoology at the Imperial university, who first suggested to him the possibility of cultivating pearl-oysters and of making them produce pearls by the use of proper stimuli. Being deeply interested in the subject, Mikimoto went afterwards to the marine biological station of the Imperial university at Visaki, where the professor was teaching, and Sometimes two pearls will be found joined together by the nacreous substance, thus forming what is known as "twin pearls."

All of these kinds of pearls are called free pearls, because they are found in the tissues of the animal's body and are not joined to the shell.

In the same way that twin pearls are joined together, it sometimes happens that pearls are found attached to the inner surface of the shell. This position interferes with the symmetry of the pearl so that when it is taken out of the shell it is flat on one side, making what is known as a "perle bouton." The attached pearls are not always of inferior quality but are often highly valued. The world-renowned "Southern Cross," which was valued at £10,000 by the company to which it belonged, was found at Cossack, Western Australia, attached to the central part of the inside of a shell.

The methods practised at the pearl-oyster farm learned from him many facts concerning pearl formation and the natural history of the pearl oyster.

Mikimoto's home was Toba in the province of Shima, one of the localities in Japan famous for large yields of pearls. Directly after his return there he began experimenting on his newly acquired idea. At first it seemed almost like pursuing a fleeting shadow and his friends laughed at him for "throwing his money into the sea." He, however, persisted, trying all sort of experiments and changing his methods from time to time, relying on suggestions and advice from Prof. Mitsukuri and Dr. Kishinoue. At the end of four years of hard work, disappointment and renewed efforts, some results were obtained which seemed to promise success. In 1896 things had so far progressed that the experimental stage was put on a commercial basis. A patent for the new method was obtained from the government, and the cultivation of the pearl-oyster on an extensive scale was begun at the Island of Tatsukujima, in the Bay of Ago. At the end of 1899 the first, though small, crop of pearls was harvested and placed on the market.

and not having any little brothers and sisters who use one of the tiny carriages, he forgot all about Mr. Lerchen's when he alighted from the car at Fourth and Grand River avenues.

In a few seconds it dawned on Ed that he must be in that part of the city for something.

"Ah, ha, I have it," exclaimed the boy. "I was to deliver Mr. Lerchen's go-cart. But where is it?" he asked himself, feeling in his pockets. "Must have left it on the car," he said finally.

Ed appealed to a patrolman, who advised him to wait on the corner for the car to return and recover the cart. That appeared logical, so he sat down on the curb to wait.

After a while a pay-enter came along and Ed saw a go-cart on the rear platform. He jumped at the conclusion that it was Mr. Lerchen's. He stopped the car and the platform door swung open. Before the conductor could close it again Ed had the go-cart and was making off.

Mrs. Frank Marvin, 278 McGraw avenue, spied him. She had two little children with her, but that didn't deter her. She grabbed them both and made a race for Ed.

"Where are you going with my go-cart?" she commanded. "Put it down this instant."

But Ed ignored her and tried to continue his journey. Mrs. Marvin wouldn't have it that way and there was a struggle for possession of the cart. The boy wouldn't let go and Mrs. Marvin clung on. Somebody called the police and Mrs. Marvin, the children, Ed and the go-cart were given a ride to police headquarters in a patrol.

HAPPENINGS IN THE CITIES

SHYLOCK'S INSISTENCY BEATEN BY A BLACK PORTIA

BIRMINGHAM, ALA.—Notwithstanding

the fact that the United States Constitution declares that no one shall be imprisoned for debt, the effort is sometimes made to use the police court as a collecting agency, generally by a creditor preferring a charge of obtaining goods by false pretences or embezzlement. Of course this doesn't always work with the judge, and it generally results in the prosecutor being taxed with the costs.

There was a reversal of this procedure the other day at the police court when Elsie Allen, a tall, gaunt negro woman of forbidding aspect, was arraigned on a charge of disorderly conduct based on her efforts to collect a debt of 20 cents.

The old woman acted as her own attorney in the case and in the ability to ask rambling questions easily came up to any of the distinguished practitioners that daily haunt the city forum. Not only that, she did what a lawyer rarely does in the police court—she cleared the defendant, thereby setting aside the familiar adage that "he (or she) who is his (or her) own attorney has a fool for a client."

The principal witness against the amiable Elsie was a Xanthine colored maiden of elephantine proportions named Molly Maybray. Molly's statement was to the effect that she had purchased 20 cents worth of peaches from the angular Elsie, and that she intended to pay for them sometime before the winter holidays. According to Molly's testimony, Shylock was not more insistent for his pound of flesh than was Elsie for her two dimes, the aforesaid insistence resulting in an attack on the fairy form of the corpulent Molly.

"Do you want to question the witness?" asked the judge at the conclusion of the statement of Molly.

"Does ah want to ax any questions?" snorted Elsie. "In course ah does. Didn't ah gin yo dat basket er peaches fur 20 cents?"

"Ah reckon so."

"Did yo' pay me dem two dimes when ah axed yo' fur 'em like er lady?"

"Lak er lady! Yo' said if ah didn't pay yo' would frow er brick at ma head."

"Did yo' gin me dat change?"

"Ah done tolle yo' ah didn't have no money."

"Yo' ain't payed me twell yet, is yo?"

"No."

"Dar yo' is," said Elsie, triumphantly addressing the Caledonian on the bench.

"Do you want to ask any more questions?" asked Judge Douglas.

"Mo' questions? What mo' questions does yo' want me ter ax? Ah knows nuffin erbout dis yere cote, ah neva has bin in jail."

"That will do" commented his honor. "you are discharged, but you must not undertake to collect any debt by such forceful methods."

Elsie glared at the judge a moment and said:

"Ah bet ah gets dat 20 cents befo' dat yaller nigger is er day older."

GO-CART IS CAUSE OF MIX-UP IN THRILLING COMEDY

DETROIT, MICH.—"The Comedy of a Go-Cart" would be an apt title for a sketch in which a woman, her two little children, a boy and a trolley car figured the other afternoon. The curtain rose when E. H. Lerchen, 146 Tuxedo avenue, hired Ed Schultz, aged sixteen, 322 Hunt street, to take a go-cart to his sister on the West side. From then on the action was swift.

Ed boarded a Jefferson car and not having any little brothers and sisters who use one of the tiny carriages, he forgot all about Mr. Lerchen's when he alighted from the car at Fourth and Grand River avenues. From then on the action was swift.

MUNICIPAL ELEPHANT SERVES AS A THIEF CHASER

MINNIE, the municipal elephant, the other day rescued Mrs. Jennie Plau, 3333 Paris avenue, from three hoodlums in the Brookside Park woods. Minnie dispersed the young men and nearly caught one of them in an exciting chase down the side of one of the peaks that rise across Big Creek opposite the Fulton road entrance.

Mrs. Plau is the wife of Paul Plau, Minnie's keeper. She had taken her young son, Arthur, eight years old, to the park to accompany Minnie and her husband on their morning walk before the visitors began to throng the meadows and woods.

Minnie is becoming very sure-footed and climbs hills like a goat, Plau says. On the morning of the adventure he had taken on a high path, fringed with bushes, that runs near the edge of the cliff. Mrs. Plau and the elephant arrived in a hurry. The boys had not seen the elephant, which had been concealed by the bushes.

"One of the boys was only a few feet away from Mrs. Plau when Minnie saw him," said Plau. "I had heard the elephant snort a little while before and I thought either a man or a dog was near."

"Go after him, Minnie," I told the elephant and she did. It was the first time I had ever seen her try to injure anyone and she surely did try to get that fellow. He dodged behind a tree and then ran down hill. Minnie went after him, but the grade saved him. Minnie is slow in going down hill. The other two fellows ran in the direction of the log cabin and all escaped."

Minnie was back in her house before 8:30, rolling her 4,300 pounds from one foot to another as if she had never seen a bandit.

HOMES DISRUPTED AND CITY DIVIDED BY LOBSTER

PHLADELPHIA.—This city is agitated as over a question which baffles solution. Wherever one goes it is being discussed. Arguments have arisen, fights have followed and arrests resulted. Homes have become disrupted and the whole city is practically divided into two factions.

The question is: "What is a lobsterster?"

It was handed up to a higher court here the other day by a police magistrate after he had spent a week in conferring with the leading lobster authorities all over the country.

The case is that of John Hauducar, chef in a local hotel, who was arrested on a charge of cruelty to animals for placing a wooden peg in the first joint back of the claw of a lobster to prevent it from snapping.

The case was argued today before Police Magistrate Haggerty by two lawyers, an amateur fisherman from Maine, a member of the cruelty society and the proprietor of the hotel.

The fisherman declared that he was well acquainted with lobsters and that he never knew one that lived in salt water that could feel pain. The attorney for the society then pleaded that all animals experienced pain and that the chef was guilty of cruelty.

The defense argued that the charge fell because the lobster is not an animal. Then the same argument that caused the adjournment of a court a week ago arose and the magistrate threw his hands up in despair.

"It's too much for me," he said. "I'll hold the defendant in $100 bonds and let the court decide the matter."

When the action of the court was announced, several fights occurred in various saloons where wagers had been placed on the outcome of the case. In the meantime the defense is planning to make a bitter fight and to carry the case up as high as it will go, provided a judgment is rendered against the chef.

BLUEJAY LIVES IN WOODS

Hawks, Owls and Other Birds Are Teased and Tormented by These Noisy Birds.

The bluejay likes best to live in thick woods, but it often comes into open fields, orchards and near dwellings in search of food. When it discovers you it assumes a proud and angry air of conceit and defiance.

The bluejay's upper parts are purplish blue. The lower parts are purplish gray. The wings and tail are bright blue with black bars. The tail feathers are tipped with white. It has a crest head.

The bluejay builds its nest about twenty feet above ground. It is made of twigs and fine roots. From four to six eggs are laid. They are of a greenish drab color flecked with brown.

Doubtless the bluejay helped to name itself, as its common utterance is a long-drawn "Jay, jay, jay." This cry, with a bright blue color, has given it its name.

While the jay sings no song it is able to imitate the calls of other birds, by which means it often attracts them. It likes to tease and torment the owl and especially the little REPUBLICAN TICKET.

FOR PRESIDENT,
WILLIAM HOWARD TAFT.

FOR VICE PRESIDENT,
JAMES S. SHERMAN.

There were forty brass bands in the funeral cortège of General Booth at London. A man is sure enough dead when his corpus can stand for that and not sit up and take notice.

With Grandma Wilson "absolutely in favor" of everything; Teddy "standing at Armageddon," Taft on the golf Links and Marse Henry yelling, "Up, boys, and at 'em!" this here old campaign is moving off with some class and eclat.

Did you ever hear of a human being of the colossal gall and affrontry of T. Roosevelt? If this man was caught in the act of burglarizing a bank he would rise up and boldly justify himself and say that he had a perfect right to see if everything was all right in vaults. Shades of George Washington and Abraham Lincoln! Is not the United States getting in a devil of a fix when a creature of his stripe and traits is called, "the greatest man in the country?"

THE NEGLECT OF ALLEYS.

An alley in Lexington has been cleaned up for the first time in forty years. Sometime in the past the alley had been paved with stone, but the pavement was covered with six inches of ashes and rubbish that had accumulated in the long period of neglect.

Cities should not build alleys and forget them. It cost the city of Lexington $400 to clean up this alley, and one wonders how the work could have been done at that price, but it would not have cost anything if Lexington had been doing her duty by that forgotten passage way during the four decades in which it was left to take care of itself. Alleys are not noted for taking care of themselves and property owners frequently are serenely indifferent to the alley conditions. Lawns generally receive some attention and even the backard is "combed and brushed" occasionally—least about the time that a visit from the sanitary inspector is anticipated. Nobody however, wastes much time in looking after the appearance of the alley.

There is a city out in California which confines heavy street traffic to the alleys and the plan is not a bad one. Under such circumstances the alleys assume the importance of streets and where there is constant and voluminous travel there must be provision for the maintenance of the arteries of travel. The alley, therefore, does not suffer for lack of pats and city officials cannot, if they would, permit it to fade from their memory and deteriorate into a mud hole or a muck heap. An average city could not relegate its traffic to the alleys because they would be inadequate taking care of it. In any state of case the fat man should not last forty years.

BLUFF AND BLUSTER OF BULL MOOSERS.

Col. Green Garrett has been in Washington, and of course mixed with the Kentuckian politicians of his own political faith quite a bit. The following special was sent out from the capital Thursday: "The fall State campaign in Kentucky from a Taft standpoint was discussed today by Senator Bradley and H. Green Garrett, member of the Kentucky Railroad Commission and Republican State Central Committeeman from the Seventh district. Mr. Garrett has been in New York on business, and came by Washington to see the Senator. 'There is a deal of hot air, and buncombe in the claims of the Kentucky Bull Moosers,' said Mr. Garrett. 'Their claims are on a party with the claims of the national Bull Moose managers—decidedly overdrawn. I think we will whip them good.' Mr. Garrett says he has recently traveled over much of Kentucky and knows whereof he speaks. He thinks Representative Caleb Powers will win out again in the Eleventh district."—Winchester Democrat.

THE BEST CITIZEN.

Who is he? He is the man who does his best. It is not goodness merely that makes a real man; it is efficiency added. If you are a carpenter, or a blacksmith, or a lawyer, or a farmer, the fact that you don't swear, get drunk, or beat your wife, is to your credit, but it doesn't make you a true man. That comes from what one does and not from what one doesn't. If a man is to do 10 in a certain time, and only does 5, he is not honest with himself or society. Fill the nation with such people as do only half or quarter what they can do well, and the nation suffers; and then we try the panacea of political platforms and high-sounding letters of acceptance.

The only platform that is worth a cent is an honest, faithful man, and you can drum up all the policies that a fertile imagination may concoct and they will not amount to a floating straw, if the citizenship itself is faithless. It is upon that that the republic rests. In the August number of the calendar of St. Joseph's Cathedral, this city, is an article from which we take the following paragraph:

"An honest person will not waste his time when he is paid for that time. Those who do so may be classed with thieves. Some who are scrupulous about taking a little money unjustly are unscrupulous about taking much greater value in the unjust waste of time. A plumber who works by the hour, is dishonest if he changes for an hour when he used half of that hour in social confab, or in loitering by the way."

Suppose this country was filled with these loafers, defrauders, gossipers and "whoopers up" of whims, we might proclaim policies on the trusts, the banks, the civil service, and along the whole line of government functions till the judgment day, and they would not amount to as much as the whine of a cat down the back alley. An honest faithful man is the best political platform ever writ.—Ohio State Journal.

And is not W. H. Taft that kind of a man?

JUSTIFIABLE HOMICIDE.

Murder most foul had been done. The victim reposed upon the sidewalk and his face had been pounded into a shapeless mass.

The police were at a loss for a clue, but Herlock Shomes, the great detective, was on the scene in a jiffy. Carefully wiping his heated face, the wonderful sleuth gazed first upon the victim and then upon the faces of the innocent bystanders.

Herlock Shomes walked up to a fat man whose garments were wet and who mopped at the streams which poured from his brow.

"I understand it all," whispered Herlock Shomes to the fat man. "He asked if it was hot enough for you, and this was your reply."

"You have guessed it right," replied the fat man. "Officers," said Herlock Shomes, "this is clearly a case of suicide. You may remove the body to the morgue."

THINKS MARKETING ONE OF LOST ARTS

Many influential and prominent women of New York city are actively co-operating with the city commission in furthering the adopted plan for the creation of public markets. Among the most enthusiastic, who is waging a systematic campaign for the creation of such a system, is Mrs. Elmer Black, the international peace advocate.

"Our plan now before the city authorities is a feasible one," said Mr. Driggs, "and one which both Mr. Miller and myself have given months of study to after long investigation of the subject in this and other countries. We are asking for five blocks, convenient to all lines of transportation, in Little West Twelfth street. The land would cost around $3,500,000 and the buildings about that much more.

"Such markets are certain effectively to reduce the cost of living and at the same time encourage farming interests. As it is now, the actual loss to farmers is great, especially in such cases where, because of congested freight conditions, owing to inadequate handling facilities, the stuff is allowed to rot before it reaches the market."

Mrs. Elmer Black, who has made a comprehensive study of foreign markets, declared that the American woman, if she wants earnestly to help reduce the cost of living, must follow the example set by her European sister and go to market.

"Marketing is practically a lost art in the cities of this country," she declared. "Women will shop for half a day for a yard of ribbon at a bargain sale, and then rush to the delicatessen or little nearby grocery, or perhaps use the phone to get their food supplies."

JUDGE SWANN ON THE "INNER CIRCLE"

"They worship no God save graft, and they bow down at the shrine of their idolatry!"

In these words Judge Edward Swann of the court of general sessions in New York summed up the police situation. Judge Swann has been a careful and patient student of the police system for many years. He has upon numerous occasions seen fit to speak about police matters from the bench.

He has listened, with astonishment at times, to the testimony given by policemen and police detectives at the trials of men charged with being common gamblers. And upon more than one occasion he has heard the foreman of a jury return a verdict of "Not guilty" in gambling cases where the district attorney had to rely almost exclusively upon the testimony of policemen and their stool pigeons.

Judge Swann was asked if in his opinion and from information that had come to him in his official capacity gambling houses and disorderly resorts could exist unless the police stood for such places and for the violation of the law.

"You cannot make me believe that such resorts could run wide open, or run at all, for any length of time, unless the police knew about it," he said. "I wish to say right here that the police department is as a rule made up of a lot of honest, courageous, fearless men. I am very fond of the every-day policeman. But in this present inquiry that has been brought about by the brutal murder of Herman Rosenthal it is shown that graft exists in the police department today."

NEGRO POPULATION IN KENTUCKY DECREASES

Federal Census Estimates That 25.2 Per. Cent Are Muliattoes

The Negro population of Kentucky decreased in the twenty years from 1890 to 1910 from 268,071 to 261,656 and the number of mulattoes among the Negroes increased in that time from 51,986 to 65,943.

The Census Bureau, in a statement on the proportion of mulattoes among the Negro population of the United States, shows that the percentage of mulattoes among the Negroes of Kentucky increased from 19.4% in 1890 to 25.2% in 1910.

The statement shows further that in 1870 the total Negro population of Kentucky was 222,210, of whom 44,711, or 20.1% were mulattoes.

DOCKET

Of Court of Appeals Very Large, With 396 Cases to Be Heard

FRANKFORT, KY., August 29th—When the Appellate Court convenes for the September term the Judges will find the largest docket in the history of the Court for a single term.

Among the many important cases which will come up for determination are the commonwealth cases against the International Harvester Company and a large Commonwealth docket numbering 31 cases. There are a total of 396 appearance cases.

The Court has been asked for rehearing in 20 cases.

BOY SCOUTS

In Kentucky Will Be Used in Conserving Birds and Animals

Having formulated a plan by which the great army of Boy Scouts of America will be drafted into service for the conservation of birds and animals, J. Quincy Ward, Executive Agent of the Kentucky Fish and Game Commission, has set to work to put the plan into operation.

He received a letter from G. H. Merritt, New York, Secretary of Editorial Board of the Boy Scouts of America, in which Merritt promises to furnish to Ward a list of the different troop leaders in this state. If the plan is successful in Kentucky it will be developed in other states.

Ripley Bee.

Easie Price, Beasie Turner, Katie Lightfoot, and Lizzie Cash, damsels of color, claiming Mayville as their home, were arrested here last week and locked up on a charge of loitering. They had been making the night hideous down in the bottoms, until they were locked up. Mayor Williams fined them $50 and cost each. They laid in jail several days before the costs were paid and the Mayor suspended the fine as long as they stayed away from Ripley.

Nannie Turner was arrested last Thursday on the charge of drunkenness, and locked up. Her fine was $12 and costs and she is still in jail.

Emma Thomas was arrested on a charge of disorderly conduct. The Mayor assessed her $25 and costs, which she paid and was released.

PARCELS POST

New Law Becomes Effective January 1st, 1913—Rates For Transportation

In response to many inquiries for information, Senator Jonathan Bourne, Jr., Chairman of the Senate Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads, has prepared the following summary of the provisions of the new Parcel Post Law which will become effective January 1st, 1913:

Any article is mailable if not over 11 pounds in weight nor more than 72 inches in length and girth combined, nor likely to injure the mails or postal equipment or employees.

Flat rate of 1 cent per ounce up to 4 ounces regardless of distance.

Above 4 ounces, rates are by the pound or fraction thereof, and varying with distance as follows:

	First	Add.	11
Pound	Pound	Pounds
Rural route and city delivery	.05	.01	.15
50-mile zone	.06	.03	.35
150-mile zone	.06	.04	.46

AFTERNOON GOWN

Photograph by Underwood & Underwood, N. Y.

The dress is of Ratine embroidered in wool and designs of roses and leaves on the overskirt. The hat is of Millin trimmings with pink roses.

BORDERS ALWAYS IN FAVOR SEEK ONLY REAL BARGAINS

At This Time Much Originality Has Been Expended in Design Put Forth for Popularity.

There is fascination in the summer bordered materials of nino, cashmere and marquisette, and every class of voile or duchesse is being made up with a border of much originality and greater prettiness. All these bordered stufis are made with an eye to the design of the gown and its style and purpose, and the result is seen in many smart and apparently exclusive costumes.

The skirt may be made in two tiers of spotted material, each tier having a wide band of some beautiful pattern, while the same pattern appears to form a corset, the upper part and sleeves being simply of the spotted stuff. A taffeta belt gives a finishing touch. The patterned border may appear around the hem of the skirt and following the outline of the deep panier, while the sleeves also are of the flowered band, the corsage being hidden by a froufie of lace.

OF PRETTY DESIGN.

This hat is of deep purple satin, lined with gold embroidery and with a large ostrich of gold.

Skirt Widths.

Much has been heard regarding full-skirts for suits next season, says the Dry Goods Economist. The skirt now being made is a happy medium between a full skirt and the very narrow one in vogue a year ago. This will no doubt be the popular width for fall and winter. It is still made to give the straight, narrow lines, but has enough fullness to permit of perfect freedom in walking. A few plats are introduced in a clever manner in the back, front or sides, but are pressed or stitched so as not to give any flare.

Bordered Fabrics.

The bordered materials are a feature of the summer's fabrics, and will be useful in designing trimmings for simply-made toilettes.

The many beautiful muslins have borders. One white muslin has a 12-inch pink border, on which are alternated lines of large and small dots embroidered in pink and white. Other muslins are to be seen in palest pink and white, and daintily white embroidered flowers scattered over the surface.

MA PUT INDIAN SIGN ON CUPID

By LAURA TURNER.

"My ma surely did put the skids under that Heinzy fellow last Sunday night," laughed the girl with the exaggerated psyche knot. "He won't come nooning around my sister Bertha any more. She giggled as she tucked in a few stray hairs that had curled over her collar and surveyed her pleasing reflection in the mirror above the lavatory.

"How did she squelch him, Annie?" asked the sleepy looking blonde, stretching her wet handkerchief across the mirror to dry it.

"Well, Bertha's had an awful case on Heinzy for quite a while. He's a widower, with a boy about five years old, but Bertha said she didn't care, for she liked him anyway. She used to rave about him until she made me and me tired. I could see from the start that ma didn't have much use for him, and she warned Bertha that all he was looking for was somebody to keep house and cook his meals for him and take care of that kid of his."

"Bertha said ma was wrong, that he was head over ears in love with her, and she wouldn't hear a word against him. Ma used to call him Bertha's fireside companion, because he never took her anywhere, but just sat around and acted as though he was afraid to spend a nickel."

"Last Sunday morning Bertha went into the kitchen and asked ma if she would let her have the Heinzy fellow to supper that evening. She coaxed around until ma finally said she could ask him if she wanted to, but you could see that ma wasn't at all crazy about having him come.

"After Bertha had gone out and ma and I were doing up the work, all of a sudden I saw that ma had an idea. She chuckled to herself the rest of the morning, but she wouldn't let me in on the joke. When I asked her about it she just told me I would have to wait and keep my eyes open and I would see something funny.

"That evening Bertha said she wanted to get supper all by herself and show Heinzy what a grand cook she was. Ma says 'All right, if you want to get a job as housekeeper, of course you must give your future boss a sample of your cooking.' With that she went upstairs.

"After a while ma came down again and asked Bertha how she was getting along. Bertha said that everything was on the stove ready to dish up, and would ma watch things while she hustled upstairs in order to primp up a bit?

"Ma said she would, so Bertha beat it upstairs to doll up for Heinzy.

"When we all filed up to the dining room and sat down things looked good to me. While ma was bringing in the dishes she says to Heinzy: 'I want you to know, Mr. Heinzy, that Bertha cooked every bit of the supper tonight, so if you like it you'll have to give her all the credit for it.'

Heinzy looked over at Bertha with a fat, contented smile and tucked a napkin under his double chin. Then he took a bite of biscuit and next I saw him look all around to see if anybody was watching him as he rolled it out of his mouth into his hand and laid it carefully on his plate. I began to get suspicious, so I took a bite of biscuit just to see. Say, it was about the awfulest tasting thing I ever ate!

"It was positively green inside! Bertha had used soda instead of baking powder, and plenty of it, too, and the biscuits were simply terrible!"

"I copied Heinzy and got rid of my bite quick as I could and took a swallow of coffee to get the taste out of my mouth. Say! The coffee was so weak it was just like water! I looked over at ma and her face was as red as a beet, she was trying so hard to keep from laughing.

"I knew pretty well then who had queered the supper. Ma must have put soda in the baking powder can so Bertha would be sure to get it, and probably she put plenty of hot water in the coffee pot after Bertha had gone upstairs.

"I was curious to know what else ma had done, so I helped myself to a chop. Salty! It was worse than rancid butter that hadn't been soaked overnight! Why, I felt pickled or brine after I swallowed it! I glanced around at Heinzy. He was the glummiest looking somebody you ever saw! Every now and then he looked at Bertha with a frown blander than a thunder cloud.

"When we came to pie I found that ma had even switched pies on poor Bertha. The under crust was just like soft rubber! Heinzy ate the filling out and left the under crust staring Bertha in the face. Then we all got up and went into the parlor, but Heinzy never said a word about Bertha's fine cooking. Bertha didn't say anything either. She had caught on right away what ma had done, but she never chirped.

"Heinzy didn't stay very late that night. I guess he was anxious to get away and hunt a lunch counter. He'd been coming to see Bertha every night for two weeks, but he hasn't been back since."

"What did Bertha say to your mother afterward?" asked the sleepy looking blonde. "Was she ugly about it?"

"I should say not! She saw that ma was right—that he was only looking for a cook—and she's glad that she found it out in time. My ma is as sharp as they make 'em, and nobody could put anything over on her. She's got the Indian sign on Cupid!"

New Material.

A new material that is being used for suits and gowns and even for handsome coats is of cotton texture, but has such a beautiful chamois finish that it places the fabric among those of more aristocratic fiber. The cloth comes in blue, lavender, tan, brown and biscuit color, and because it will wash instead of requiring a dry cleaner is most practical as well as sightly.

Polish Tan Shoes Before Wearing.

A dealer told me to always polish tan shoes before they were worn. It is almost impossible to remove spots from them, unless they are polished before they are worn, thus filling up the pores of the leather.—McCall's Magazine.

CHARACTERISTICS OF IDEAL FEEDER STEER

A Profitable Bunch.

One of the first things I look for in a steer bought for a feeder is a loose, pliable, mellow skin, with a thick cover of thrifty looking hair. If the other points of the steer are satisfactory, these indicate an animal that can turn corn into good beef at a relatively small cost.

In buying feeders in stock pens or auction sales, look for the short neck, short legs, deep body and straight back, says a writer in the Farm Progress. Of course, I do not expect smoothness in a feeder steer, but neither do I want high thigh bones and a general appearance of coarseness.

Try to imagine how the steer will look when fat and ready for the market. If his neck is thin, will it become thicker? If the back is thin, is there still thickness enough to carry the load of fat that you hope to put there?

It does not matter much whether the feeder steer is an animal in which Angus or Galloway, Hereford or Shorthorn blood predominates. They are all breeds in which the same purpose has been kept in mind. They are all well fleshed, early maturing stock, with a capacity of turning large amounts of feed into good red beef at a low cost.

When I buy a feeder steer I look for an animal with a short, broad head, large muzzle, heavy, strong jaw; smooth, strong shoulders, and a wide, deep chest. I want no disturbers in a herd that I am feeding, so I keep the feeder steer valuable to the man who buys and the man who sells him.

For a good many years I have been buying feeder steers shipped into a stockyard, shipping them about eight miles and finishing them on corn and roughage. Most of them are western cattle. They are a little slow in starting to take on weight, but fatten very rapidly a little later in their feeding. It is better to buy them by carload lots, in order to save money on the yardage, the commission and the freight. A carload of such steers will run from eighteen to twenty-two lots you have to take the disposition for granted.

The chest should be wide, especially at the bottom, and the body big enough to give storage room to the corn and the roughage that you are going to put in this machine that it is to turn it into beef. The more nearly the feeder steer approaches the general type of the fat beef steer, the more he is worth to the man who buys and the man who sells him.

The change in the steer during the finishing period is remarkable. Where the heavy muscles are noticeable fat layers will appear, giving smoothness to form. The rump, the back, the neck and the shoulder points will broaden and round out.

The feeder steer is valuable to the man with ready money for his purchase, and the feed necessary for his finishing up into a fat steer. If you are able to turn him into an animal that will yield a minimum of waste and a maximum of carcass, you have an animal that will make the feeding of corn that costs as high as 80 cents a bushel profitable.

TRAINING TREE FOR ANY SHAPE DESIRED

Care Should Be Exercised to Keep Top Open to Admit Rays of Sun.

It is much better to train a tree the shape it is wanted than allow it to grow wild, then chop and saw it into the desired shape, says the Mirror and Farmer.

If sprouts starting from the body of the tree or along the main branches are pinched when they are three or four inches long they will ordinarily form fruit spurs. Aim to get more fruit buds near the body of the tree at this time are just as bad as a child cutting his teeth. It is not the mere fact of losing feathers or pushing a tooth through as much as the constitutional disturbance that is set up. One symptom of moulting is lethargy. The birds, instead of being early risers, mope about on their perches and will not venture out in search of food that is essential to them at this trying period. Dainty food should be prepared. Warm meal with a dash of spice in it in the morning and continual change.

As color is an important factor, care should be exercised to keep the top open so that the rays of the sun can reach to every part at some portion of the day. To accomplish this it may be well to do some pruning when the tree is in full leaf; cutting 10 or even 15 per cent of the top away when the tree is in full leaf will cause no serious injury.

If the trees are carefully looked over about three times during the growing season, and the ends of those spouts that are growing too long are pinched off, the tree may be kept to the desired shape. But where a shoot has been overlooked it is better to cut it out when found than wait until winter. Negligence during the growing season is about the only logical reason for severe winter pruning.

"When we came to pie I found that ma had even switched pies on poor Bertha. The under crust was just like soft rubber! Heinzy ate the filling out and left the under crust staring Bertha in the face. Then we all got up and went into the parlor, but Heinzy never said a word about Bertha's fine cooking. Bertha didn't say anything either. Eggs and Meat.

Eggs do not differ greatly in composition from meat. The average egg, as purchased, consists of about eleven per cent waste material or shell. The edible portion consists of about 74 per cent water, 12 per cent protein or muscle-building material, 10.5 per cent fat, and 1 per cent mineral matter.

Theory of Mulching.

Here is the theory of mulching. A bunch of big weeds growing vigorously beside a tree rob it of moisture. These same weeds cut off and put on top of the ground no longer rob but save water.

PROPER FEEDING OF MOULTING CHICKENS

Hens Require Extra Amount of Care and Attention During Period.

(By PROF. L. SWINNEY.)

During moulting the hens require an extra amount of care and in fact all the attention which can be given them. In too many instances moulting is considered just a natural sequence of poultry keeping. The fowls at this time are just as bad as a child cutting his teeth. It is not the mere fact of losing feathers or pushing a tooth through as much as the constitutional disturbance that is set up. One symptom of moulting is lethargy. The birds, instead of being early risers, mope about on their perches and will not venture out in search of food that is essential to them at this trying period. Dainty food should be prepared. Warm meal with a dash of spice in it in the morning and continual change.

In regard to grain: Corn, wheat, barley, oats and mashed potatoes with meal—anything to tempt the appetite—two or three rusty nails or a bit of sulphur in the drinking water are great helps. In confined runs meat must be added, and, in fact, scraps of meat will be given on any run.

Two things are essential: (1) That fairly early each morning the hen house should be cleared of belated risers; (2) the floor should be swept at the same time, as a lot of vermin come off with the shed feathers. These sweepings should be taken right away and not put on the nearest manure heap. After moulting is over give morning mash of shorts and bran in a crumbly condition and feed plenty of oats.

Severe pruning while the tree is in a dormant state stimulates more rapid and abundant wood growth, about four-fifths of which will grow where it is not wanted, necessitating yet more cutting the following season.

Pinching the summer pruning stimulates the production of fruit buds, and tends toward better maturity of both buds and fruit. Plan to grow an abundance of fruit spurs well distributed over the whole tree.

Benefits of Fall Plowing.

Fall plowing has many advantages. Perhaps the greatest one among all is the fact that it does a great deal of helping to avoid the usual rush of spring work. In these days of labor scarcity, this means a great deal. Fall plowing is also very efficient in conserving the moisture supply owing to the creation of a mulch at the surface during the winter and spring months. The practice of fall plowing is not adapted to a section where the soil blows badly, but there are really few such sections in the middle west.

Poultry Yard Essentials.

This is the season of the year when the grit boxes must be refilled often. Nests kept clean and free from vermin. Plenty of fresh water kept before the chicks at all times. Dust boxes refilled and all the little details daily attended to. Then with whitewash, lime paint and all the implements of war, that fence out for the army of lice and mites that are ready to seek and devour. They always have their armor on and are ready for business. Do not let them go the first insuring.

MAST TREES FOR THE CROWN

Mark of the Broad Arrow Was Placed on Pines in the Plymouth Colony.

In the provincial charter of 1691, under which the Plymouth colony and the provinces of Maine were united with Massachusetts, it was provided that all trees of the diameter of 24 inches and upward of 12 inches from the ground, growing upon land not heretofore granted to any private person, should be reserved to the crown for the furnishing of masts for the royal navy. Harper's Weekly observes.

A surveyor general of woods was appointed to see that this provision of the charter was carried into effect.

Near the coast all white pines of suitable dimensions were marked with the "broad arrow"—three cuts through the bark with an ax, like the track of a crow. This was the king's mark.

Long after the revolution had obliterated the royal authority men who had been taught in boyhood to respect the king's mark hesitated to cut such trees.

In felling a tree it was necessary to "bed it" to prevent its breaking.

This was done by cutting the small growth and placing small trees across the hollow, so that there should be no strain upon one section more than upon another when the monster pine struck ground.

MAN AND THE SOIL.

Dr. R. V. Pierce of Buffalo, author of the Common Sense Medical Adviser, says "why does not the farmer treat his own body as he treats the land he cultivates. It puts back in phosphate what he takes out in crops, or the land would grow poor. The farmer should put back into his body the vital elements exhausted by labor, or by ill-health induced by some chronic disease." Further, he says, "the great value of my Doctor Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is in its revitalizing power. It gives strength to the stomach and purity to the blood. It is like the phosphates which supply nature with the substances that build up the crops. The far-reaching action of Doctor Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is due to its effect on the stomach and organs of digestion and nutrition. Diseases that begin in the stomach are cured through the stomach. A bilious spell is simply the result of an effort made by the liver to catch up when over-worked and exhausted. I have found the 'Discovery' to be unsurpassed as a liver regulator and rich blood-maker."

Mrs. LOTTIE KINSEY of Perth, Kansas, says: "I will add my testimony to the effects of your Remedy upon myself. I was taken sick in India two years ago, and was unable to get well again before taking numerous kinds of so-called 'stomach cures' but received no permanent relief. I was run down, could not sleep at night with the pain in my chest caused by gas on the stomach. Was weak, could eat scarcely anything although I was hungry nearly all the time. About one year and a half ago I began taking your 'Golden Medical Discovery,' and after having taken several bottles was nearly cured of stomach trouble. Can now eat without distress and have gained fifteen pounds in weight. Thank you for your remedy and wish you all success in your good work."
